

Hi Dana, Oct. 2021

My nomination will go as follows:

“Despite Doctor Kurt Samways’ petite physique, he possesses the strength of a mighty skunk-horse. Additionally, as the very first Parks Canada Research chair, he boasts an unparalleled level of intellect and cunning (despite being a goaltender for many years). Unfortunately, his cunning did not save us from pure catastrophe one torrid afternoon on the Battle Creek.

Kurt is not the kind of man to read the instructions, his IKEA furniture is completely assembled using his own doctorly-intuition. This foolhardy habit did not cease when we tackled the precise wiring of our solar panel setup.

Having not read the instructions, Kurt confidently attached each delicate wire to the pristine equipment he had claimed to have mastered long ago. First, he connected the cables from the batteries; then the panels. To our dismay, the dainty machine was destroyed. Alas, on the very first page of our instruction manual, in bold letters, it stated: DO NOT PLUG BATTERIES IN BEFORE SOLAR PANELS.

Rest In Peace, Charge Regulator.”

Will this work?
